Will Be Presented 22nd of March

St. John Ervine, the author of "The First Mrs. Frazer," which will be presented at the Community hall on March 22nd by the Champion Dramatic Society, is a distinguished British critic and dramatist. Among the plays which he has written "The First Mrs. Frazer" is generally considered to be one of his finest. This witty and entertaining comedy has not often been presented outside of the larger cities, and the local Dramatic Society is pleased to have the opportunity of offering it in Champion. The story deals with the conflict of wills and ambitions, which arises between the first Mrs. Frazer and the second Mrs. Frazer. These two roles will be filled by Miss Jean Anderson and Mrs. C. Lucia with B. F. Good taking the part of James Frazer, the former husband of the first Mrs. Frazer and the present husband of the second Mrs. Frazer.

The play which includes in its cast those mentioned above Sanford Anderson and Donald Campbell as Norman and Muriel Frazer, the two sons of the first Mrs. Frazer, Miss Buddy James as Alice Frazer, the wife of Muriel, Harold Macmillan as Philip Logan, and Mrs. E. Latiff as Mabel, has been working for several months, and those who have seen the play in rehearsal have been highly pleased with it. Mrs. J. N. Beauber, who is honorary president of the Dramatic Society, has charge of the ticket sales. Get yours now!

IMPORTANT - TO WHEAT GROWERS

Under wheat grading regulations coming into effect August 1, 1935 the matter of purity of variety is one of primary importance.

Regardless of whether your wheat is Marquis, Garnet, R-ward, 222 or any other variety, it is desirable from a marketing standpoint that it be uniform in type.

Excessive admixture one way or the other will be liable to grade penalties under the amendment to the Canada Grain Act.

The Brighter Side

For the past five years the people of Canada in common with those of other countries have been looking at the dark side of things, and during these years the picture at which they have been looking has become progressively darker and more gloomy. In fact, following the stock market crash in the late months of 1929, people generally did not seek to find any rays of light, they became more and more fearful and preferred to dwell upon every unfavorable factor in the situation and to close their eyes and refuse to see what was around them except the dark.

This state of mind spread throughout the whole country and, unfortunately for Western Canada, it was accentuated by reason of the want of a typical Canadian dry humor. People were continually comparing their afternoons at posts and other drawbacks entirely beyond the control of man, and all discouraging and destructive of confidence on the part of people so great and so varied as ours.

Under such circumstances the amazing thing is that people, taken on the whole, have displayed such wonderful fortitude, so much courage and such great patience.

Within recent months the clouds of depression have been thinning, conditions have been slowly improving, and the time has come when, I trust, the people of Canada may look to their own advantage and further encouragement to the long hard task of getting back into the stream of life for which they have deep reason for thankfulness in comparison with the lot of other peoples and nations.

Under such circumstances the amazing thing is that people, taken on the whole, have displayed such wonderful fortitude, so much courage and such great patience.

The financial business situation in Canada is improving. In view of the economic depth to which the whole world had sunk, this improvement will naturally be slow at first, but it is gathering momentum and volume. The trade in Canada is increasing, the volume of shipping is increasing; the volume of business is becoming larger; railway revenues are rising; national revenues are substantially larger and are increasing; all of which means more money available for the public welfare. The one important action is to remove or materially lessen the many restrictions now imposed on trade.

At the present time the Canadian picture is to be found in the fact that, despite all the difficulties and problems, worries and sufferings of people, Canada has been remarkably free of riots and other forms of disturbance. The Canadian people have responded in open strife and bloodshed. The Canadian people have kept their hands clean, though they are winning through, just as the people of Britain are winning through.

Considering the past, the present and the future, there is another and very large and important spot of brightness, leading to hope and confidence for the future. For the fact is that Canada is almost among the nations of the world Canada has been free and is free of war, and is the only nation whose crushing force upon the world to-day. That is the burden of armaments—the sole burden of worldwide preparations. While other nations are paying annual tribute to the cost of maintaining armaments, Canada, under the great war god Mars, the Canadian people are not called upon to do so.

A couple of small destroyers, one on either seas coast, and a handful of militia, are all that Canada needs to defend her borders and to help her country to assist if and when necessary in the maintenance of peace within our own borders, but in no sense an army maintained for offense against any other nation. And Canada has no need to maintain a great line of fortifications, Canada lives at peace with the world, the friends of every nation, having no quarrel with any nation.

In the past, the Canadian people were taxed to the limit, as other peoples are, to provide the god of war with the machinery and equipment of wholesale human destruction, then Canada might have cause to complain.

Given a return to more normal and therefore favorable climatic conditions throughout Western Canada, with a removal of the artificial restrictions on agriculture, trade, transportation and business life of the country—both of which conditions are not only good but also necessary, we have every reason to expect—and free from the entanglements of war—bright days ahead. The Canadian people without any undue optimism may well turn their eyes away from the darker picture of the past few years, and find renewed confidence and happiness in the brighter, better days now dawning.

Magic of Science

Electric Lung Restores Speech To Persons Without Voice

An electric "lung" and a pair of magnetic handbells, both new, have come out of the scientific magic box of the laboratory.

They were shown at a meeting of the University of Michigan Club of New York by Dr. Sergius P. Grace, vice-president of the laboratories.

The device is a small, current-free safe to make vocal sounds in the artificial larynx, which the laboratories invented to restore speech to about 1,000 persons in the United States who have lost their vocal cords.

The new instrument is placed in the mouth, much like a pipe. It pours into the mouth a pure tone which becomes intelligible speech merely by movement of mouth, lips and tongue in ordinary conversational manner. The device is run on a small battery little bigger than a deck of cards. He puts his "pipe" in his mouth. He presses a button and the sound continues as long as he holds this switch closed.

The magnetic handbells demonstrate the super-magnetic power of a new alloy which possesses 20 times the attraction of pure iron. With a cuff on each wrist, or hand on each hand, the chain between is joined by placing together two flat pieces of the new metal.

The most powerful man cannot pull these plates apart.

WHY HIS HEADACHES CEASED

Wife Put Kruschen In His Coffee

He could not understand why his headache had suddenly stopped, so he wrote his wife and told her he was once a boy of ten years, I was subjected to very bad headaches, for what reason I did not know. I was surprised when one day my wife said she had been taking Kruschen salts in my coffee for over two years. I am still using them, as I know nothing finer for the system.

Her husband had always been subject to a disordered stomach, and the continued retention in the body of stomach poisons caused him to feel unwell again, and he will never be troubled again.

Kruschen salts brings swiftness and strength to the body. Kruschen salts add Nature to cleanse your body completely of all clogging waste matter.

His play is systematic, without being sensationally high, but it is seldom that he gets up from the green table a loser. His identity remains a mystery. He knows little French.

Larks Damage Wheat

Farmers In England Have Started War On Songsters

Even if Shelley wrote an oad about it and Schubert was inspired by it to compose his famous symphony, the bird is just a bird that damages wheat and other crops. So declare the farmers in the vicinity of Norfolk, England, and they have started a war on the songster. The Norfolk Agricultural Society has had existing against the new bird under the Wild Birds Protection Act. Any one therefore may shoot it and have lark pie. "The skylark is a nice bird, but you can't live by listening to music," says Mr. Howell, an agricultural leader. The larks are said to invade England in flocks from Germany and Russia.

The architectural toy, built at a cost of $43,500, will be taken on a world tour and the proceeds from exhibitions will be donated to hospitals for crippled children.

The doll house contains these marvels:

A gold cathedral organ, 15 inches high, which plays music, twelve nightlights operated by electricity.

Light bulbs the size of wheat grains.

A robot fairy princess who sings, answers questions and dances in a garden grove.

A diamond drill comes from Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company claims at Beaverfoot by report to have shown rich deposits of gold 30 feet below the surface.

Township That Is Unique

Adamsfield, Australia, Isolated Although Only 24 Miles From Hobart

There has been discovered to the world a township in Tasmania, Australia, which is unique at any rate, in the southern hemisphere.

It has no hotel, there is no church, no weddings have been held there, there is no clergyman, and the town is under the control of a vigilance committee.

The township is that of Adamsfield, less than 70 miles as the crow flies from Hobart, and only 24 miles from a railway. From the railhead, however, the nearest point of communication is by horse.

Some of the residents have not "been out end"—that is, made the journey out to civilization—for years, and it is possible for the stray visitor who finds his way in to grow the year, which the world outside has done, by the fashions they are following.

The vigilance committee is a real power and has come into being because of the rare visits of a policeman or a four-mile inspection. The committee finds in the effect that public opinion is the most effective weapon it wields.

Recently an area of agricultural land was taken up 15 miles "in" from Adamsfield, and every item of supplies had to be taken in on men's shoulders.

Nationalistic Policy

Sir Joseph Stamp Believes U.S. Policy Does Not Fit Needs

Sir Joseph Stamp, famed economist, in a speech before the American Chamber of Commerce said the United States "is pursuing a highly centralized nationalistic policy which is ill-suited to the needs of the world economy."

"The NRA codes," he said, "have not paid very great attention to international factors and the uncertain conditions in America has been causing alarm throughout the world."

The picayune treatment of the problems of the nation is wrong. It is unnatural for trade to be balanced between two nations. It is more important that trade with all countries be balanced as a whole."

Sir Joseph stressed the importance of currency stabilization and said, "If it was known the United States were going to devalue another 10 per cent, it would help matters greatly."

Nine Directors Are Elected At Meeting In Brandon

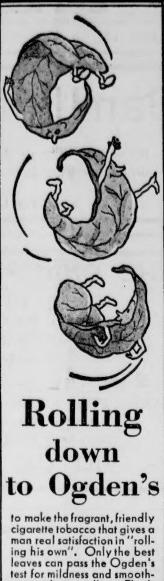

The nine directors of the Canadian Percheron Association, elected by ballot, were announced at Brandon by A. M. MacPherson, secretary of the association.

The new directors are J. A. Stensciani of Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere, Que.; Charles M. McCallum, Brampton, Ont.; M. W. Connel, Keswick, Ont.; James Ramsey, Portage la Prairie, Man.; Carl Roberts, St. Adolphe, Man.; John E. Salter, Calif.; W. A. Greenway, Acme, Alta.; J. B. Ross, Govan, Sask., and L. A. Starvation The Cure

When People Do Not Have Money To Buy Fresh Foods Then Health Is Improved

In days of depression, general health is better than in days of opulence and fine living, several doctors in the United States are urging starvation health. Dr. J. P. Howlin (Lrb., St. Boniface) said "starvation is the cure for many diseases" and it was because people did not have the money to buy rich foods that their health improved.

Dr. Howlin added, that "many people dig their graves with their teeth."

SYNOPSIS

"You've fallen heir to a half-share in plenty of trouble," the lawyer said. Gerald Keene, the new owner, had been systematically looting the ranch, and old Joe Carr, your partner, is dimming his light."

Dad Kane, desert rat and luckless prospector, till now returns to tell Dustin about his Goddard. He's grabbed him, of his discovery of a rich gold mine, and shows samples of it.

Dustin unexpectedly comes along while Stone and Eddie are riding fence, and they stop to talk to Edith. He mentions their dispute could be settled by marrying him, and Eddie says he'll do it. That's the mark that makes Dustin furious. He insults Stone, who promptly throws him out of the saloon.

Stone tells Crews, his foreman, about his meeting with Dustin, Eddie, and Carr. "I'm gonna go to the sheriff to Gerald Keene. While at Seco an attempt is made to kill Stone, who is more than a match for his enemies."

Bertus leads him to the door. Bertus has seen and heard that Stone has been given the Broken Spur men rusting Dan Carr's cattle. He sets out with Dan and his discovery. Dan Kane shows Dusty the mine.

"They're to blame," says Bertus. "He led me to Carr, and Dustin shot Carr. He led me shooting on Poytelli Gregg, a drug addict, who stopped him. Bertus, he had no taken, did not know whether he was guilty or not. They bury Kane and I think he's innocent."

Meanwhile at the Hour Glass Inn, Crews and Stone speculate on the most likely culprit. Bertus, the book belonging to Dan Kane that Stone had found, Stone thinks of a possible assassin. Bertus, who has seen Dan Carr, rides out to Red Water to test out his theory, which proves correct. And the boy Bertus, who is mentioned in the prospector's notebook. As they return to the ranch, they see Dan Carr, having hours who purposefully, but unsuccessfully tries to ride down Stone.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued

"Well, hell, I've got a better plan than that," Dustin growls. "It's the grin of a dog who sees the meat that he intends to seize." "Wait! If I had sprung that on Joe Carr, he'd simply wait till the old Gerald Keene, his partner, came along. You'd never have known the money. He'd then old Carr would get out of my clutches. See? Keene would sure help Carr meet that note. He'd sure do it if he ever learns of what we found in the old man Kane's house. I told Carr that if he'll get Edith to agree to marry me, I'll call off the suit about Soda Springs. He can't finance that suit anyway. See?"

"I have given your hand away when there was no need to!"

"Hub. Suppose you got four good aces in the hole. What then?"

"Show me your aces," growled Spike. "Dust, I can see any sign of aces in the hole."

"All right. I'll show you. Do you happen to remember the date that young imp of hell, Gerald Keene, the owner of the other half of the Hours glass, is due here?"

Poytelli looked dazed. He had looked for a coin and perhaps an errand and he found a threat that he only half understood. He could not guess what will come of it.

"I'll be damned if I'm on the verge of being violently ill. His stomach was queasy. Man, born of woman, cannot smoke unlimitedly. Poytelli cigarettes to kill the memory of a murderer that he never committed. He carry himself like a free man. Poytelli squirmed and Dustin glared at him.

"I wish I could help you, Poytelli."

"But I don't see how I can."

"What's the matter, boss? What's come up?"

"You know damned well what you did. The question is how's you going to keep the world from knowing what you did, too? I hate to see you at the bottom of the rope, Poytelli. You remember Willa?"

Poytelli gulped suddenly and sat down. He remembered Poytelli very well. Caught while in the very act of changing brands on the Cross Keys stock, Poytelli had been given two hours to confess his

"I've been stripped! The Hours glass of everything it's got for more'n five years," said Spike. "If one of us told what he know about the other, he'd sure as hell go to jail, I reckon. I can't tell him what a rascal you could raise. We've got seventeen thousand in cold cash right now in our safe, safe. You don't need to have me say it but . . . Make your game. I'm playin' her as she lays."

Dustin nodded complete satisfaction.

"I know you'd say that," he said.

"Now listen. . . . Old Kane located that mine. It's on the Hours-glass, I know that. And Poytelli and I went there. Kane located the mine."

"Then he and Poytelli got into a fight over some water. I wasn't in camp when it happened but I got back to find Kane dead with his head mashed in and Poytelli in one of his hands. He was after dopin' up an with his stuff. . . ."

"That you give him . . . ."

Dustin's face turned the color of oil dough. He leaned forward and gripped Spike's shoulders.

"You won't be my partner, I'd kill you for that word," he said.

Spike shivered. He felt suddenly as though his veins had been filled with ice water.

". . . Go on," said awkwardly.

"Okay. Well, when Poytelli saw what he'd done, he went all to pieces. Old Kane is buried up Red Water canon. No one will ever find him there. Well . . . ."

"This man Gerald Keene is comin' out here to investigate the reported death of his uncle, Dad Kane. . . . If the murderer is discovered Poytelli will hang . . . . It's gettin' clear to you?"

"Good God," said Spike explosively.

"Do you expect me to believe that?"

"I don't care a damn if you believe it not so long as Poytelli believes it. Get me so far?"

"I sure do," said Spike, glancing around at his partner. This would be a master stroke indeed. If Poytelli Gregg, the well-known "hophead" could be got to kill Gerald Keene then Keene's share of the Hours-glass would pass to old Joe Carr and that old Joe Carr's son, Bertus. Bertus, when Kane and Dustin had located the gold.

"By God," he said, "you're hit. But I swear I don't see how you can pull it off."

You don't have to see. Go on out of here and tell Poytelli that I to be at home. Not a word more than that."

Poytelli dropped his hat at the door and came staggering into the room. Dustin looked up from some pretend work at the desk.

"It's a good thing for you, Poytelli that you came at once," he said. "I'll sleep better, but I don't see how I can help you. Remember old Dad Kane, Poytelli?"

"For heaven's sake lay off that Mist! Sam . . . . The man's arm flung up to guard his eyes as he hurried to the door again.

"I ain't sleep a wink since I came back. I'd never sleep if it wasn't for . . . . for . . . ."

He tugged a red-and-green cigarette packet from his pocket.

Dustin snatched it from him, tore out four cigarettes and gave them to him, and thrust the package into his drawer.

"You damned fool. I've told you a dozen times not to smoke those things except what I give you. Give you your full amount. Just suppose you take too many of these and talk too much. You know what's what?"

"I'll be hung a high as high as a goddam testy."

"Poytelli looked dazed. He had looked for a coin and perhaps an errand and he found a threat that he only half understood. He could not guess what will come of it.

"I'll be damned if I'm on the verge of being violently ill. His stomach was queasy. Man, born of woman, cannot smoke unlimitedly. Poytelli cigarettes to kill the memory of a murderer that he never committed. He carry himself like a free man. Poytelli squirmed and Dustin glared at him.

Poytelli gulped suddenly and sat down. He remembered Poytelli very well. Caught while in the very act of changing brands on the Cross Keys stock, Poytelli had been given two hours to confess his

"I've been stripped! The Hours glass of everything it's got for more'n five years," said Spike. "If one of us told what he know about the other, he'd sure as hell go to jail, I reckon. I can't tell him what a rascal you could raise. We've got seventeen thousand in cold cash right now in our safe, safe. You don't need to have me say it but . . . Make your game. I'm playin' her as she lays."

Dustin nodded complete satisfaction.

"I know you'd say that," he said.

"Now listen. . . . Old Kane located that mine. It's on the Hours-glass, I know that. And Poytelli and I went there. Kane located the mine."

"Then he and Poytelli got into a fight over some water. I wasn't in camp when it happened but I got back to find Kane dead with his head mashed in and Poytelli in one of his hands. He was after dopin' up an with his stuff. . . ."

"That you give him . . . ."

Dustin's face turned the color of oil dough. He leaned forward and gripped Spike's shoulders.

"You won't be my partner, I'd kill you for that word," he said.

Spike shivered. He felt suddenly as though his veins had been filled with ice water.

". . . Go on," said awkwardly.

"Okay. Well, when Poytelli saw what he'd done, he went all to pieces. Old Kane is buried up Red Water canon. No one will ever find him there. Well . . . ."

"This man Gerald Keene is comin' out here to investigate the reported death of his uncle, Dad Kane. . . . If the murderer is discovered Poytelli will hang . . . . It's gettin' clear to you?"

"Good God," said Spike explosively.

"Do you expect me to believe that?"

"I don't care a damn if you believe it not so long as Poytelli believes it. Get me so far?"

"I sure do," said Spike, glancing around at his partner. This would be a master stroke indeed. If Poytelli Gregg, the well-known "hophead" could be got to kill Gerald Keene then Keene's share of the Hours-glass would pass to old Joe Carr and that old Joe Carr's son, Bertus. Bertus, when Kane and Dustin had located the gold.

"By God," he said, "you're hit. But I swear I don't see how you can pull it off."

You don't have to see. Go on out of here and tell Poytelli that I the time had been wholly insufficient and Wills had gone to some quiet place with a lame leg about his neck. Payotelli had been swinging the long body swinging in the wind under a giant live oak while a yellow-hammer and two woodpeckers hammered cheerfully above him. He had never forgotten it and Dustin knew it.

"You see, Poytelli, it's this way. When you killed old man Kane, we thought he was just an old desert rat who had no friends. It seems we were wrong. Some friends have been here. He had a nephew. His name is Gerald Kane or Keene or something like that. Anyhow old man Kane must have written him that he had found a gold mine. This agent telegraphed to him to let him know he was to come to town to look up his uncle. You know what that means. Every one knows that I've been grub-stakin' old man Kane. They'll come to me first of all. If they ask me any questions, Poytelli, tell them the truth. I'll willing to help you all I can. Poytelli, but not to the extent of perjury. Of course I know just what you did, but I don't know how it was done. You know, Poytelli, that you have to leave town. You had a bad dream and you got into a doped up old man Kane and killed him

Poytelli said, "Mexican ain't for everybody," he mumbled.

"That's right you there. They extradite for murder in Mexico. I guess you've got to pay the bill, Poytelli . . . . if this man Gerald Kane turns up."

He had suggested the answer even to a drugged brain.

Champion Badminton Players Clean Up

Champion were the successful winners in all the first events in the inter-town tournament held at Vulcan Wednesday afternoon. In the mixed doubles, Mrs. McIntyre and Fred Watts defeated Mrs. Ditto and C. Lucia to win the cup in this event. Charlie Lucia and F. Bungay won the cup in the men's doubles defeating F. Watts and G. M. Campbell of Champion. Both the above games provided plenty of thrill, being tied at several points, the final score in both cases being 21-20. Mrs. Ditto and Miss Barbara Bastin won ladies doubles by defeating Miss Flo Gill and Miss A. Williamson. The Gill Williams team put up a good fight throughout the series and were highly applauded by the spectators. Mrs. Ditto and Miss Bastin are a strong team and played with remarkable ability. Other events were won by Vulcan. Cups were offered in the first events.

Mention can also be made of the other teams from Champion competing, as they all advanced up to the finals and at all times provided interesting play.

G. M. Campbell feels that he has been driving anything about an Eskimo, he too would be displaying a cup or maybe two.

Entertain Elks

The Lodge of the Royal Purple entertained the Elks at ten tables of bridge on Tuesday evening, March 6th.

Following were the prizewinners: Mrs. E. Latiff, first; Mrs. W. F. Bozarth, and Ted Carlson consolation.

After supper dancing continued the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Davis, who have spent the winter months in Long Beach, California, are expected to return to Champion, around March 15.

G.I.T. Girls Tea Big Success

The proceeds of the tea given by the girls of the G.I.T. group were $33. $2150 will be added to the fund to send the girls to their summer camp.

The hall was prettily decorated in blue and orange and the girls wore dresses of those colors.

Mrs. Collins and Mrs. Letoff had fun during the afternoon. Marlene McCullough played the piano. Everybody enjoyed the program of dancing given by Marjorie Ditto and Eva Letoff. Musical selections were presented by Anna Baker, Maxine Ditto, Dorothy Hummel and Louretta Clever.

The songs of Dora Miller were favorably received. Special mention should be made of Virginia Farmer, Phyllis Chamberlin, Marie Gilroy, Pauline Fisher and Dorothy Hummel, who made the play "Anne of Green Gables" so decided-a-success.

The girls wish to thank all of those who so generously contributed toward the success of the tea.

Don Campbell's View On Recent Hockey Game With Fish-Eaters

The Fish-Eaters introduced a new game on ice and with hockey sticks to the All Star Champion hockey team on Sunday afternoon. They certainly took us into camp but we hope that in the near future we will be able to learn this game and give the Fish-Eaters a little more opposition.

STANGIE-ALCOCK

Holding high place among the season's weddings was that celebrated Monday afternoon,

March 4th, at the Anglican church in Vulcan, when Kathleen, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Aleck, became the bride of Mr. Alec Stangie of

Champion. The Rev. Victor

Smith performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was charming in her frock of blue georgette, made on flaring lines to floor length, with which she wore white accessories. She carried a butterfly bouquet of Madame Butterly roses and ferns.

Mrs. Kathleen Nolin, dressed in a lovely pale pink gown with white accessories acted as bridesmaid. The best man was Wilford Stangie, brother of the groom.

Mrs. Aleck played the wedding music and during the signing of the register, Mr. Hunger accompanied by Mrs. Bach sang, "I love you truly" and "O Promise me."

Following the wedding, a buffet luncheon was served, at the home of the bride's parents. The table which was beautifully decorated with carnations was set with a three tier wedding cake.

Many beautiful gifts were received by the bride. The couple will reside on their farm three miles south of Carmarthen.

The Chronicle joins with the community in extending their best wishes to the happy couple.

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Campbell, Mrs. B. Anderson and Mrs. W. A. McInroy were Lethbridge visitors Saturday.

Glenn Becker who underwent an operation for appendicitis Wednesday is progressing very favorably.

Local & General

Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Farmer were Clarendon visitors Wednesday

Mrs. Fred Clever is spending a few days in Vulcan, guest at the home of Mrs. H. N. Neal.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Anderson moved to the farm this week.

The Champion Company of Girl Guides will have a tea on Saturday April 20th.

Miss Anne Peffers was the week and guest of relatives at Grancourt.

Joe Marks of Calgary was a business visitor in town over the weekend.

Frank Sison is having his son redecorated this week, with D. Eliot in charge.

Mrs. Boden is expected home next week, having undergone an operation in the Galt hospital Lethbridge, recently.

W. Diemert is in Lethbridge this week where he is sitting on jury.

Born To Mr. and Mrs. R. Moore, on March 6th at the local hospital, a son, (stillborn).

Rev. Peter Dawson was the speaker at a Small Credit meeting held in Elmhurst on Wednesday evening.

Ladies' Aid

Owing to the illness in Mrs. A. W. Jopling's home the regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. Gately with a good attendance of members and visitors. As "Shamrock Tea" will be held on Sunday, March 10th of which Mrs. Alva Baker and Mrs. Fred Clever are conveners. All willing to assist will kindly phone the Secretary, Mrs. Campbell or the President, Mrs. Alva Baker.
